

Opposite: The Florida coastline. Were all of the West Antarctic ice sheet to flow into the ocean, the coastline of the southern United States would be changed dramatically, as seen in this illustration of the impact of a 5 m rise in sea level (Image courtesy William Haxby, Lamont Doherty Geophysical Observatory).